Hotel and Office Campus: functional and elegant.

The facade of the HOC was designed with natural stone and deep soffits. In combination with the bronze-coloured windows, they give the impression of classic elegance and a sense of calm. At the same time, the plans of the campus were based on the historic commercial architecture commonly seen along the River Spree.

Strict requirements for sustainable building had to be upheld during the planning and construction of the HOC, which had a very positive impact on the energy efficiency of the buildings. This success was recognised with the Silver DGNB certification awarded by the German Sustainable Building Council and the LEED certification in Gold. The sustainable construction methods not only benefit the environment, but also the tenants and owners of the HOC Berlin.
