From a listed production facility to a modern educational centre

One focus was on preserving the old building stock as far as possible and equipping it with modern technology. In the spirit of sustainability, the focus was on environmentally friendly energy from district heating and renewable electricity from photovoltaic systems. The materials obtained during the renovation work were also reused. Without further soil sealing and urban sprawl in rural areas, an industrial site steeped in history has been preserved and made usable for future generations. With the transformation of the Erbse, the team has succeeded in creating a prime example of the sustainable use of historical buildings, which is groundbreaking for construction projects in the town centre.

Impressions

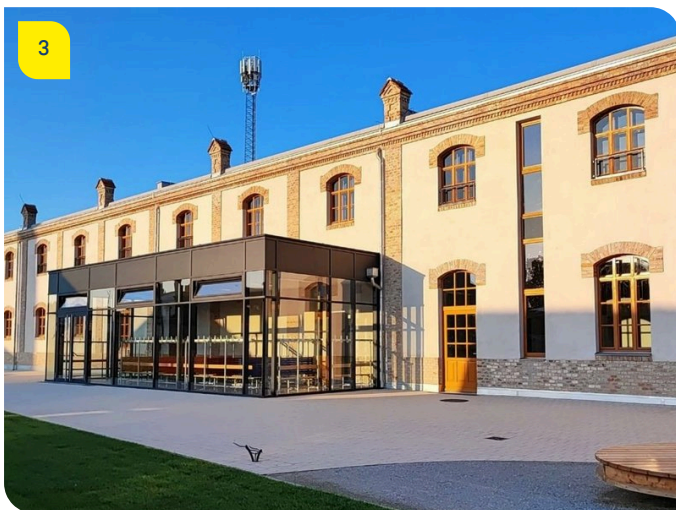

Image notes

1

New life for a historic industrial building

The new primary school in Bruckneudorf combines modern infrastructure with historical charm.

2

A new town centre is being created

The spacious open space in front of the school is a social meeting place for all generations.

Old and new perfectly combined

Modern extensions to the historic building create exciting contrasts
